The article is devoted to solving the problem of review reconstruction of historical dynamics and tendencies of folding and development of the highest professional educational system of Kabardino-Balkaria as a key factor of formation and reproduction of human capital in the region. The reference to the economic category in the context of the stated topic is justified by three points: the nature of the concept itself, which includes the key criteria for assessing the development of modern society in time and space, and not in static; the possibility of revealing the regularities of the transformation of the structural element in the formation of human capital; the main trends in the development of fundamental science in the format of interdisciplinary research. Identifying the role and importance of Kabardino-Balkaria's professional education in the formation of human capital at different historical intervals will help to expand and deepen the boundaries of existing ideas about the problems and prospects for the sustainable development of modern society.

Keywords: Kabardino-Balkaria, Pedagogical Institute, University, higher professional education, personnel training, social mobility, human capital.
