The article considers structure, functions and some features of the functioning of authorities in the Nalchik district of the Terek region in 1888-1917. This time is influenced, on the one hand, by the adoption in 1888 of the provision "On the establishment of the management of the Kuban and Terek regions and the Black Sea district," on the other – by revolutionary events of 1917. The specifics of the organization of power at the regional, district and rural levels was investigated. It was concluded that the existing hierarchy of administrative institutions on the territory of the Nalchik district reflected the military-civilian model of management, which allowed the local administration at the regional, district and rural levels to pursue an all-Russian policy of search and implementation of effective models of regional management.

Keywords: Nalchik district, Terek region, authorities, management system, district government, rural government.
